Sheriff, Deputies Lose Suit

The jury awarded six plaintiffs a total of $99,000 in damages against Williamson County Sheriff August Bosshard and three deputies in a civil suit alleging that the four men violated the constitutional rights of Jimmie Darrell Fielder, a Round Rock resident who died in the county jail in 1974. The suit charged that the men all violated Fielder's rights by denying him medical attention while he was a prisoner in the jail.

Fire Damages Boat Plant

A fire and explosion that created heat of furnace intensity caused damage of between $150,000 and $200,000 in less than an hour's time Friday afternoon at the main building of one of Gatesville's major industries -- the Anchor Plastics boat factory on FM 116 a mile southwest of town. A massive cleanup of the smoke-blackened interior of the steel building that covers 34,000 square feet is now underway.

Crime Spree Ends For Youth

A crime spree by a 15-year-old runaway from a San Antonio orphanage and one or two of his juvenile friends ended abruptly last week with arrests and recovery of a variety of merchandise and money stolen in several breakins. The police said the youths were responsible for a breakin at the Lampasas Middle School and another breakin at a warehouse earlier in the week.

Landmark Demolition Discussed

During the regular meeting of the Caldwell city council last week, the demolition of the "Three-Cornered Building" on State Highway 36 south was discussed. The old frame building has long been a landmark for travelers along the highway and has been used for a variety of purposes. The building is owned by a Houston man.

Expenses Run Over Revenue

Bell County's complex financial situation shows expenditures of $1,709,000 over revenue in 1975 in the outside audit of county books presented to Commissioners Court. The audit is for only nine months and does not include any tax revenue period. Also, auditors pointed out, there is no budget to compare expenditures to, as Bell County changed from a calendar year to a fiscal year in 1975.

Damage Suit Withdrawn

A $20,000 damage suit against six former and current Rockdale elected officials has been withdrawn in U. S. District Court in Waco. Nicholas Esquibel Jr. had filed the lawsuit in 1975 contending that, as a result of information concerning him that Constable Spud Caywood received from the DPS, the city council decided on Aug. 28 of that year not to honor an agreement with him.

City Files Intervention

In an effort to block Continental Telephone Company's request for a rate increase, the city of Burnet filed an intervention with the Public Utilities Commission. If approved, the residential base rates inside the city would be raised by 44 percent from a present rate of $9.25 to $13.35 and the business phone rates would increase 59 percent.

10,340 Voters Registered In County

A total of 10,340 Milam County residents have registered to vote in the November general election, according to the county tax assessor-collector's office, but workers are having a bit of trouble with returned registration forms.

A spokesman at the county office said many voters are not including the precinct they live in and are not signing the forms before returning them to the office.

According to the county tax office, if the voter will include the name of the community in which he lives, the office will be able to classify him in the proper precinct.

The form must be signed, or the voter will not be eligible for taking part in the election.

Deadline for voter registration is Friday, October 1.

Registration forms are available at the tax office in Cameron, Safeway Store in Cameron, Gaither Motor Co. in Rockdale and Rep. Dan Kubiak's office in Rockdale.

Senator Lloyd Bentsen today urged Texas voters to register to vote prior to the upcoming deadline.

"Texans are fortunate to have one of the most progressive and convenient voter registration systems in the nation," Bentsen said. "I urge every eligible Texan to meet his duty by registering and voting in the crucial elections to be held this November."

Reserved Seats Urged For Rockdale Game

All seats on the press box side of Yoe stadium, with the exception of half of the A section, will be reserved for the Rockdale-Cameron game Friday.

The A section is on the west end of the stadium.

General admission will be for half of A section and the north side bleachers not reserved for school bands.

Fans who have been depending on general admission seats need to buy reserved seats in advance in order to be assured of having a place to sit.

These extra reserved seats will be in effect only for the Rockdale game.

Tax Advice Available

A representative of the state comptroller's office will be available at the Milam County tax assessor's office in Cameron on Tuesday, Sept. 28 from 10 to 12 a.m. to answer questions about state sales tax.

Help Available For Livestock Producers

COLLEGE STATION

The last chance is approaching for livestock producers facing financial problems to take advantage of the Emergency Livestock Credit Act of 1974, a temporary Farmers Home Administration program.

Now two years old, the Act provides for emergency financial help to the producer whose business has a good chance of success if it can survive the current liquidity crisis.

"The revised Act now in effect has changes to make it more palatable to both the borrower and lender," points out Dr. Wayne Hayenga, project leader in farm management for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Some of the conditions are as follows:

1. A "line of credit" is permitted, whereas the original Act permitted only a single loan.

2. Anyone with a "substantial operation" in breeding, raising, fattening or marketing is eligible. (This includes one who devotes at least 25 per cent of his time to, derives at least 25 per cent of his income from, or has at least 25 per cent of his capital invested in livestock operations).

3. The Act terminates on Dec. 31, 1976.

4. The loan period can be up to seven years, with possible renewal for three years.

5. The guarantee by the Farmers Home Administration is increased from 80 per cent of the loss to 90 per cent of the loan principal and interest.

6. The line of credit has been increased from the previous $250,000 to $350,000 per loan.

7. Secondary financing of the guaranteed portion of loans may now be made by the Federal Financing Bank, thus increasing the marketability of the securities to the lender.

8. The total authorization under the Act was reduced from $2 billion to $1.5 billion.

Many cattlemen can use this type of financing due to present economic conditions, contends the economist. Therefore, the Emergency Livestock Credit Act should help them protect their operations from financial disaster in the coming months.

Hayenga advises stockmen to contact their local Farmers Home Administration office or their lender for particular details. This must be done before the Act expires on Dec. 31.

Merit Program Commends Delony

Principal John M. Chubb announced that one senior at Yoe High School has been named Commended Student in the Merit Program by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. A letter of commendation was presented to David Delony, son of Mrs. Don Humble of Cameron.

David is among 35,000 Commended students nationwide who are being recognized for their outstanding performance on the 1975 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

Commended students represent less than two percent of the nation's secondary school senior class.

Ford 39%, Carter 31%, 'Everyman' 30%?

The first debate produced assurances from partisan supporters that partisan Carter and partisan Ford had won the first round. The comments following the Philadelphia confrontation of the Georgian and the President were almost too predictable to report on national and international television.

One network noted a rating firm questioned 600 people immediately following the hour and one-half debate, extended almost another half hour by audio failure.

The results showed 39 percent thought Mr. Ford won, 31 percent thought Mr. Carter won. This leaves 30 percent uncertain, about the percentage an independent candidate would be carrying if he were part of a viable, financed campaign.

Mr. Carter attacked the President's two-year record as ineffective while Mr. Ford said the governor's four years as Georgia governor were not as effective as he implied, that Carter's successor governor testified in Washington that Georgia's welfare program was a "shambles."

But exchanges over taxes, economy, unemployment, legislation, pardons, vetoes, leadership, party policy produced responses and direct comments already on the record. This first of three presidential debates produced a series of 12 questions, responses, counter responses, and summations.

If anything, Mr. Ford ended on a stronger note because the audio breakdown split the final summations from the rest of the debate, cutting into Carter's last response to a question.

But it seemed that Ford gained strength in the latter half of the debate on facts, always a factor in debate, while the Carter appeal stayed on the same key throughout with a soft-line, though emphasic questioning of Ford and Republican leadership.

Ford talked more in terms of dollars and budgets and economics while Carter talked in terms of social needs in employment and new ideas in the White House. These seemed to follow basic differences in current approaches to executive leadership between parties.

Ford made one telling point in discussing taxes, which Carter failed to refute. The President noted the Democratic proposal of about 60 new programs would cost at least $100 billion and perhaps $200 billion a year. Carter's thrust was toward 3 percent unemployment and a balanced budget by 1980, accumulating by then a $60 billion surplus to help pay for some of the new costs.

It was a certain charisma vs. Presidential decorum. And if that poll is significant as it was immediate, neither man dominated the debate even to the point of a real plurality vote of confidence.

Carter would hope to make a greater impression in the first debate on domestic issues, because the next one is on foreign policy and defense. Most observers think the President would be more knowledgable in those areas.

Round 2 is October 6.

Oceans...

Our Continuing Frontier

By H. William Menard

Editor's Note: This is the first of 16 articles in the series "Oceans: Our Continuing Frontier." In this opening article, Professor H. William Menard of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, University of California, San Diego, discusses why the oceans have been important to the American nation in the past and why they may be regarded as a continuing frontier for all nations now and in the future. These articles, which explore the whole range of human involvement with the sea, were written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities

Once the whole world was a frontier challenging man. Now the land is explored, occupied, and bursting with people. Only the sea remains as Byron described it, "dark--heaving--boundless--endless and sublime." It is to this frontier that people turn increasingly in the hope that it will offer the riches of the frontiers that are gone--or because it seems the last hope.

In America the hope surges high. This is only fitting, for no great nation has been more intimately linked to the sea throughout its history. Nor none so negligent of that link when other frontiers beckoned. Across the sea our ancestors came, willy nilly, in an unmatched migration. Only the Polynesians went farther seeking homes, and them the sea conquered.

The founding Americans clung to the sea at first, and most of us are still clustered there in great cities that began as ports. More and more the sea interests the city dwellers for sport, surfing and diving, but it was not always so.

In those ports we once built a merchant fleet that culminated in the clipper ships--the queens of the seas, when the '49ers sailed to California. By 1890 when the American Admiral Mahan wrote his great theoretical analysis, "The Influence of Sea Power Upon History," the fleet was gone. We built it again during the World Wars, watched it rust, and again it is gone.

IN PURSUIT OF LEVIATHAN

From the tiny ports of New England issued the men who did not fear to battle in his own element the largest animal that ever lived. From pole to pole and through the tropic clime they pursued leviathan for his oil until one da y a new frontier opened and cheaper oil was found on the land. All that remained was a tradition, a few men telling sea stories and a few women staring moist-eyed at the sea. Those and an epic masterpiece, Melville's "Moby Dick."

That was a century ago. Now the oil fields of the land grow as elusive as the great white whale. A new breed of American has turned to the sea seeking oil from the continental shelf. Monstrous and marvelous towers rise from the waves, and the accents of Texas are heard from the North Sea to the Persian Gulf. These too will pass--a field yields oil for only a few decades.

A sperm whale calf, newborn by the polar ice, will outlive the oil fields--if we let it. The living resources of the sea will help to feed us forever if we only can control human ignorance and greed. Fisheries in their present form, however, will not help much more than they do now. What can be hoped of hunting? We would not be what we are, nor in our present predicament, if we had not invented farming 10,000 years ago. The world needs to farm the sea and herd the fish.

The most advanced and productive farms in the world are in America. One very important reason for this preeminence is the advancement of agricultural research that occurred in the Land Grant Colleges. Taking note of this, the nation is beginning to support the Sea Grant Colleges and foster the development of the resources of the sea.

I say "beginning" although the program is several years old, because the application of science and industry to marine food production is surely in its infancy. Here and there in the world we crop oysters and shrimp and other high cost foods. Likewise we are learning to cultivate lobster and abalone. Even on a large scale these developments will not feed very many people, but they may encourage greater advances. The plants and animals of our farms are not those we acquired from the wild state millennia ago. They were specially bred to grow rapidly, resist disease, and yield food.

The plants and animals of the sea remain to be bred for our purposes. Why pursue the tuna? Why should he not forage for himself and return to our cooking pots like the salmon? To change the tuna we must change our viewpoint.

CHANGING VIEWPOINTS

Not long ago all our views of the sea were derived from the land, but attitudes and viewpoints are changing. The horrors of the deep have become the shy creatures of Jacques Cousteau's movies. What was a global myth of a flood has become a measured, dated global rise in sea level. We had chanteys about the whale--no w we have recorded the eerie moving song of the whale himself. Can we, with such a song echoing in memory, still hunt leviathan? We had paintings of the sea--now we have painters under the sea who feel as well as see what they are painting.

The most profound changes in our views have to do with our basic understanding of the world around us. Working on and in the heaving sea, scientists have come to a new perception of the solid land they left behind.

The floor of the abyss is splitting apart; the land moves;whole continents drift from pole to equator; and the history of the world is not what it seemed. This revolutionary viewpoint, as startling as the idea once was that the earth moves around the sun, is opening new frontiers of the mind that will help us to understand the physical frontiers of the sea.

The sea is a continuing frontier because it has been too strong to be subdued. The balance is changing. We have not fished the oceans clean but we probably could. We have not poisoned them but we could. Few scientists belive that we have significantly altered the vast open ocean, but near the cities we have. Even a sea as large as the Mediterranean may already be in danger because it is enclosed--and many of its burgeoning industrial cities dump sewage as they did in ancient, emptier times.

Even the open sea is defensless against the pollution of some new materials created by man. No organisms nor natural reactions affect them, and they will become ever more objectionable for ages to come. Finally we face the ultimate pollution of nuclear wastes, not necessarily those from power plants which might possibly be containable. A twenty-minute exchange of nuclear rockets could poison the sea.

The frontier of the sea has much to offer. Properly developed it can provide challenges for future generations of pioneers. People who have the spirit and will to farm, herd, and mine the sea. People who teach, study, paint, and write about the sea while they are on and in it.

There will be a price to pay and, as times change, some of the moist eyes gazing at the sea may belong to men. However, we shall never learn to conquer the new frontier unless we first control ourselves. Nothing could be worse for mankind --or the sea--than a lawless technological race. "Endless," wrote Byron, but the uncontrolled resources are not. "Boundless," but the emerging law of the sea could bind it. "Sublime," let us unite to keep it so.

4-H CLUB NEWS

By Kenneth Waites

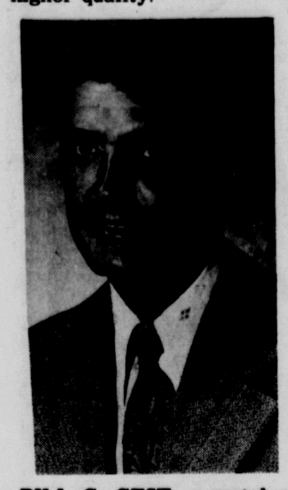
Each year the Milam County Farm Bureau sponsors a swine program for the Milam County 4-H youths. Five gilts are given to five 4-Hers to feed, show in the County Livestock Show, and to raise a litter of pigs. From each litter, a gilt is selected which will be passed on to another 4-H member.

You must give one of the gilts of the litter to an applicant of the coming year. If a superior gilt cannot be selected, you will be required to purchase a gilt from one of the other litters of higher quality.

It is also required that the feeder keep a good set of records throughout the year. These records, facilities, and litters will be judged at weaning.

This is a great learning experience for the youths and a project that you can be actively involved.

All you have to do to apply for a gilt is write a paragraph on why you would like to have a gilt and send it to the County Extension office by Oct. 20.



BILL G. GEST, a metal records lead clerk at Alcoa's Rockdale Works, has become the first locally hired employe to be inducted into Alcoa's 25-Year Club. He is the 36th local member of the organization composed of 24,000 Alcoans.

Six Flags Begins Fall Schedule

Six Flags Over Texas has begun weekend-only operation for the fall months on the heels of the most successful spring and summer seasons in the theme park's 16-year history.

Through Labor Day more than 2,217,000 persons had visited the Arlington entertainment center, topping the old record by more than 200,000 visitors.

General Manager Dan Howells credited the attendance spurt to the introduction this year of the Texas Chute Out, a 1.5 million dollar parachute drop.

"The parachute ride is the most spectacular addition to the park in several years," Howells said, "and there's not a doubt in our minds that it has been the key to the unprecedented attendance we've enjoyed so far this year."

Six Flags Over Texas will be open Saturdays and Sundays only through the last weekend in November. Hours on Saturday will be 10 a.m. until midnight in September; 10 a.m. until 10 p.m. in October, and 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. in November. Breath Of Life Week Opens County Campaign

Sept. 30-Oct. 14 has been designated Breath of Life Week in Milam County, according to Betty DeWees, chairman of the local Cystic Fibrosis drive.

The Breath of Life campaign is conducted annually by the Lone Star Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation which supports research, care, and education programs for children suffering from lung-damaging diseases.

Mrs. DeWees, chairman of the 1976 Breath of Life fund raising drive, said tha parents especially should know the signs of lung-damaging diseases.

"This awareness can faci litate early diagnosis and treatment of these diseases," she explained. "Particularly with cystic fibrosis, early treatment can help prolong a child's life."

Signs of lung-damaging disease are recurrent wheezing, persistent coughing with excessive mucus, pneumonia more than once, excessive appetite but poor weight gain and clubbing or enlargement of fingertips.

Other signs that are peculiar to cystic fibrosis are a salty taste of the skin, persistent and bulky diarrhea and nasal polyps.

Diagnosis and treatment of cystic fibrosis and other children's lung-damaging diseases, Mrs. DeWees pointed out, are provided by a nationwide network of more than 100 Cystic Fibrosis Centers supported by the cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Scouts Invite Boys To Join

Area boys are being invited to join Scout Troops or Cub Scout packs as a part of the annual fall membership program of the Heart O'Texas Council, Boy Scouts of America.

The Cub Scout program is a family-centered program for boys who have completed the second grade or who will be 8-10 years of age. They meet weekly as a den under the supervision of a den leader, and all the dens come together for a monthly pack meeting led by a Cubmaster. Boys start as Bobcats and through achievements earn Wolf, Bear, and Arrow of Light awards.

The Scout program is for boys who have completed the 5th grade or who are 11-17 years of age. The program is designed to develop character, mental and physical fitness, and citizenship training. The focus is on one's physical and mental fitness through a vigorous program of activites.

As Scouts, boys join patrols and elect their own patrol leader. They usually meet once a week as a troop under the guidance of a Scoutmaster. A boy joins as a Scout and can achieve Tenderfoot, Second Class, First Class, Star, Life, and Eagle progress awards.

Additional information about the Scout and Cub Scout program is available from the Heart O'Texas Council service center, 300 Lake Air Drive, Waco, TX 76710.

Directing the membership program for the Heart O'Texas Council is Olin Hudson of Waco.

An elephant drinks by drawing water halfway up his trunk and then squirting it down his throat!

A LITTLE BIT of bribery and 'Hedy Larue' lands herself a kiss with the frightened, unwilling young executive 'Finch' in his boss' office. Mark Hamilton portrays 'Finch' and Danielle Hibbard is 'Hedy Larue' in this glittering musical hit at the Country Dinner Playhouse in Austin. New Catalog Offers Tips For Shoppers

Shopping for the kids could be easier this Christmas.

Guidelines telling how toys can meet a child's needs have been developed by a panel of four child development authorities and appear for the first time in the new JCPenney Christmas Catalog.

The panel included Drs. Clyde A. Jones and E. Duwayne Keller, University of Connecticut; human relations specialist Paul F. Nuttall, University of Connecticut Cooperative Extension Service; and Mrs. Kathleen Holman Langan, consumer affairs consultant and author.

A full page of consumer information about toys precedes the toy section of the 512-page catalog and discusses such subjects as what constitutes a good toy, what to expect of it, how a child can get the most from it, and children's individual needs.

Subsequent items throughout the section highlight specific toy categories such as dolls, games, and bikes. Care was taken to avoid endorsement of any specific toy or brand.

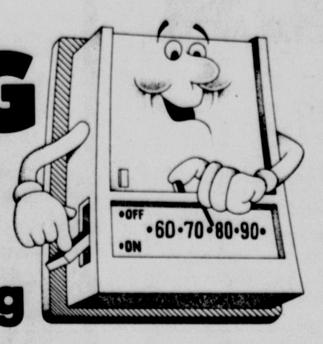
SAVING TIPS on electric air conditioning



Air conditioning provides lots of comfort during the summer months, but for many thousands of homeowners it is also the biggest factor in the cost of electricity. For example, a 3-ton air conditioning unit uses about fifteen times as much electricity as a color television. The cost of operating a 3-ton unit 18 hours per day is approximately $3.50.

On the average, air conditioning accounts for about half of summertime electric bills.

Here are ways you can hold down the cost of air conditioning and still enjoy its comfort.

Central Systems

1. Set thermostat on 78°, or higher, during the summer. Turn unit off if you'll be away from home several days.
2. Keep equipment at top operating efficiency. Have it checked seasonally by qualified serviceman.
3. Check filter every 30 days. If filter is permanent, clean by manufacturer's directions; if it's disposable, it should be replaced when dirty.
4. Keep furniture, draperies away from air outlets and returns. Clean grills often.
5. Close draperies and blinds to keep out direct sunlight.
6. Keep fireplace damper closed.
7. Proper home insulation keeps the heat out, cuts energy use. Insulation questions? Call TP&L.
8. Trim trees, shrubs away from outside compressor unit. Keep it free of leaves, debris. If air flow is blocked, unit uses more energy.
9. Weatherstrip doors and windows; caulk cracks to prevent drafts and cool air loss.
10. Keep windows closed. Open outside doors as little as possible.

Window Units

Follow above suggestions, plus these:

11. Buy units with highest "energy efficiency ratio" (EER). Uses less electricity to cool. If EER is not on sales tag, ask for it or figure it yourself. Divide "wattage" into "BTU" capacity. Both figures are on unit.
12. Place unit where it'll get as little direct sun as possible.
13. Never vent air conditioner into garage. Ventilation is usually too poor for top performance of your unit.

Conserve electricity and you help conserve one or more of the fuels needed to produce it. Conserve fuels and you help assure that there will be enough to meet essential needs for electricity in the future.

When you pass a TP&L office, warehouse, generating plant or other facility, you'll see that we've turned off all non-essential lighting. And, in as many other ways as possible, TP&L is reducing its own uses of electricity.

If you would like additional information on conserving electricity, call the Customer Service Representative in the TP&L Office.

GENEVA

Sickness around the world would fall by 80 percent if people in poor countries could be given pure drinking water, according to estimates by World Health Organization experts here. The experts say that more than 1.2 billion people, one-third of the world's population, in developing countries lack safe drinking water supplies and more than 1.4 billion have no sanitary waste disposal facilities.

BELFAST

A swathe of black paint splashed on the front of a small suburban house gave ominous warning of what could be in store for Belfast's women of peace once the television men switch off their lights and depart. The women who are turning out in their thousands to try to halt the northern Irish bloodshed feel relatively safe now.

GENEVA

Disputes over a Russian bomber and a deadly accurate American missle seem likely to cloud Soviet-US negotiations aimed at curbing the nuclear arsenals of the two major powers. About 90 percent of the text of a new stragetic arms limitation treaty has been agreed in talks between the two sides over the past 19 months, according to reliable Washington sources.

JOHANNESBURG

The new leader of the Soweto students' representative council, Khoto Sydney Seatloho, says recent student demonstrations in South Africa have made blacks realize their strength and power. They have also made many white South Africans realize there is a need for change, he says. Seatloho became leader of the students' representative council in place of Tsietsi Mashinini

LONDON

Some neavy smokers in Britain have been able to kick the habit by stubbing out their cigarettes and chewing a stick of "nicotine gum" instead. Doctors at an anti-smoking clinic here have been testing the gum, which contains the nicotine that occurs naturally in tobacco leaves, on smokers who want to give up cigarettes. Many scientists believe it is the nicotine in tobacco that cause the stimulation smokers seem to crave.

LIBREVILLE, GABON

The Gabonese capital of Libreville is being turned into a gigantic building yard in preparation for the organization of African unity summit meeting here next year. Gabonese foreign ministry officials confirmed that the 14th OAU summit would be held next June in this city of 120,000 people bordering the Atlantic Ocean close to the Equator. Final dates for this annual African heads of state gathering and the ministers meeting have not been announced so far.

JAKARTA

Indonesia is taking urgent measures to build up its rice stocks, fearful that a prolonged drought could lead to a shortage of the nation's staple food. Rice has always played crucial role in the life of the sprawling archipelago and with Indonesia's population now more than 130 million, the government is determined to prevent a recurrence of the crisis of 1972. Imports of rice from Thailand, Burma and the United States have pushed up the country's reserves.

RIO DE JANERIO

Brazilian bus passengers, already endangered by their drivers tendency to fly off bridges or crash into other vehicles, now face the threat of almost daily assaults by bandits. On some days, especially at night in the poorer suburbs of Rio de Janeiro, there have been as many as five holdups. And in recent weeks hijackers, boarding as passengers at the bus station, have commandeered two buses on the main road, forced the drivers to detour to a secluded area and robbed the passengers.

Reemphasis Placed On Patriotism

For more than 50 years patriotism has played an important role in the program of the Boy Scouts of America. And now there is a reemphasis for the 255 Cub Scout packs, Scout troops, and Explorer posts in this area to focus in on that important role played throughout the birth and growth of our country.

Floyd Jensen, president of the Heart O'Texas Council, which services 11 1/2 counties of Central Texas, cites the "greater need today for emphasis on patriotism as our nation goes through a period when some of its basic foundations are challenged."

"What we are doing," Jensen said, "is to continue to emphasize strongly the obligations emobdied in the Scout oath and law in preparing the nation's youth to become useful and patriotic citizens of tomorrow."

The year's bicentennial emphasis for the Boy Scouts is Be Prepared for Life: Be Safe, Be Fit.

Scouting, as an educational movement, requires a boy to live up to a standard or a code of laws which ensures development of character, Jensen said. It requires him to study in order to pass certain tests of qualification, and he takes part in activities that have character, citizenship, and fitness as their aims.

Audit Detections Worth The Outlay

Comptroller Bob Bullock said Thursday that audit detections and field collections by the enforcement officers of his Belton district office provided a return of $21.60 for every dollar invested in the state office during the state fiscal year that just ended.

"It's as clear as icewater," said Bullock, "that the enforcement program of the Comptroller's Office is an investment that pays big dividends for the people of this state."

In the JV game the Yoe fems defeated Caldwell 15-4 and 15-11.

High point server for the JV was Vicki Brashear with 9 points. She picked up 9 straight points in the second game when the Yoe girls were down 11-5.

Tullullah Green aced the last serve to give the Yoe girls the game and match.

Get In Shape For Hunting Season Through Exercise

AUSTIN

Eleven months of the year the Texas sportsman sits behind a desk, smokes too much, gets very little exercise, and battles an ever-expanding waistline.

His only outing is on the deer lease in November where he huffs and puffs all day long and collapses exhausted in the top bunk each night.

The white-tailed deer he pursues have a better chance of survival than our out-of-shape hunter.

Most hunters take better care of their equipment than themselves. And this season will be the last for some sportsmen who are carried home by hunting companions--victims of heart attacks.

The best insurance against a heart attack is to keep physically fit throughout the year.

Slim and trim officials at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department recommend bicycling, hiking, jogging, swimming for staying in shape during the year. But someone who works in an office all year should not wait until October to start on a program of exercise.
